

Dear Customer or Supplier,

The General Data Protection Regulations come into effect on 25th May 2018 and set out the main principles of data protection and the responsibilities organizations have when handling personal data. The legislation protects individuals' personal information and improves their control over how it is collected, stored, shared and used.

As a valued contact, your details are held on our database. We have your details only, if you have chosen to give them to us and we guarantee that we will handle them with great caution. The data we hold includes your name, e-mail address, company information, role and phone number. We also hold your purchase history. In the case of suppliers and service providers, company bank details are also held on a secure database.

We use your data for delivery and invoicing purposes and to be able to send you valuable information about our products, orders and relevant information about our company. We share information only with our trusted cooperation partners regarding mentioned operations and only in its necessary extent.

We would also like to send you interesting and relevant content by e-mail in the future. If, however, you would like your details to be removed from our database or you wish more information, please do not hesitate to contact us.
